INTRODUCTION
The purpose of this experiment is to determine the effect of temperature on the rate of reaction between hydrogen peroxide and potassium iodide. The reaction is catalyzed by the presence of a small amount of potassium iodide. The rate of reaction is measured by the volume of oxygen gas evolved over a period of time. The experiment is carried out at three different temperatures: 25°C, 35°C, and 45°C. The results show that the rate of reaction increases with increasing temperature. This is due to the fact that at higher temperatures, the molecules have more kinetic energy and are therefore more likely to collide with sufficient energy to overcome the activation energy barrier. The experiment also demonstrates the effect of the concentration of the reactants on the rate of reaction. It is found that the rate of reaction increases with increasing concentration of both hydrogen peroxide and potassium iodide. This is because a higher concentration of reactants leads to a higher frequency of collisions between the molecules. The experiment is carried out in a laboratory setting using standard chemical reagents and equipment. The results are presented in a table and discussed in detail. The conclusion is that the rate of reaction increases with increasing temperature and concentration of the reactants. The experiment is a classic demonstration of the effect of temperature and concentration on the rate of a chemical reaction.
