 - a. A goal
 - b. An assessment

 - a. A "right time" problem
 - b. A "right dose" problem
 - c. A "right route" problem
 - d. A "right medication" problem

ANS: C

This is a "right route" problem; the nurse cannot assume the route and must clarify the route with the physician. A "right time" problem because the ordered frequency has not changed. This is not a "right dose" problem because of an inability to swallow. This is not a "right medication" problem because the medication ordered will still be given.

Having the patient demonstrate safe insulin self-administration technique is a specific and measurable outcome. Following instructions and avoiding complications are not specific criteria. Adherence to the new insulin treatment regimen would be difficult to measure.

DIF: Cognitive Level: Application
