Structural Study of Wind Turbine

Fluid structural interaction on a wind turbine and the theory of Finite element has been widely studied in various studies. Stolarski (2012) and other researchers from the University of Minnesota, Department of Civil engineering developed a novel computation model meant for describing the structural behavior of wind turbines through the application of behaviors typical of the shell structure. They used the ratio of a spam length which was approximately 45 meters and a cord length of between 1 to 3 meters which is more common among the structural beams than shells. However, both the shell and beam models are used to analyze wind turbine blades.

On the other hand, Hsu and Bazilevs (2012) presented their aerodynamics and fluid-structure interaction (FSI) computation methodologies that allowed dynamics, fully coupled 3D FSI simulation of wind turbines at full scale. For the interaction of wind and flexible blades, they used a nonmatching interface discretization approach whereby the aerodynamics is created using a low-order finite element based technique. Therefore, the theory of finite element analysis can be related to this work of Hsu and Bazilevs (2012) in the process of simplifying the complex problem to small manageable problems.

The rotor blades of Hsu and Bazilevs are designed as thin composite shell discretized using NURB-based isogeometric analysis (IGA) (Hsu & Bazilevs, 2012).
