Curry Naben Ruthnum, 2017-08-14 No two curries are the same This Curry asks why the dish is supposed to represent everything brown people eat read and do Curry is a dish that doesn't quite exist but as this hilarious and sharp essay points out a dish that doesn't properly exist can have infinite equally authentic variations By grappling with novels recipes travelogues pop culture and his own background Naben Ruthnum depicts how the distinctive taste of curry has often become maladroit shorthand for brown identity With the sardonic wit of Gita Mehta's Karma Cola and the refined obsessive palette of Bill Buford's Heat Ruthnum sinks his teeth into the story of how the beloved flavour calcified into an aesthetic genre that limits the imaginations of writers readers and eaters Following in the footsteps of Salman Rushdie's Imaginary Homelands Curry cracks open anew the staid narrative of an authentically Indian diasporic experience

Humphrys, 2009-09-10 A very funny tome DAILY TELEGRAPH Hilarious DAILY MAIL A profoundly instructive course in the idiosyncrasies of Greek law custom and culture entertainingly chronicled SAGA From Radio 4 presenter bestselling author and national treasure John Humphrys a funny and engaging memoir of building a home in Greece written together with his son Christopher It was a moment of mad impulse when John Humphrys decided to buy a semi derelict cottage and a building site on a plot of land overlooking the Aegean A few minutes gazing out over the most glorious bay he had ever seen was all it took to persuade him After all his son Christopher was already raising his family there so he would help build the beautiful villa that would soon rise there What could possibly go wrong Everything John was to spend the next three years regretting his moment of madness Some of it had its comic side He learned to cope with a drunken peacock falling out of his favourite tree and even a colony of rats invading his bedroom Some of the humans proved trickier the old man demanding payment for olive trees in the middle of John's own land the neighbour who dragged his lovely old fishing boat onto the beach and set fire to it after a row with his wife And of course the builders Was the plumber who electrocuted him in the shower vengeful or merely incompetent John learned a lot about Greece in a short time He grew to love it and loathe it in almost equal measures but was never for a moment bored by it And Christopher learned a bit more about John Their shared experience revived keen memories for him of growing up with a father for whom patience was never the strongest virtue Here father and son capture the idyll and the odyssey as paradise is found lost and regained
