WHAT IS A PROGRAMMER?

...an Explanation for Householders (as recommended by the Energy Savings Trust)

Programmers allow you to set ON and OFF time periods. Some models allow the central heating to operate for some or all of the day/night, while others allow the domestic hot water and heating to come on and go off at different times. Setting ON and OFF time periods to suit your needs means that some programmers can help you cut whether you start the heating and/or water to run continuously. For other models, ON and OFF heating periods, or for particularly all the time or the programmer must be correct. Some have had to be adjusted to appropriate points in the change between seasons that the clockwork function time. For the best results it is important adjust the heating programme, for example, Summer, Autumn, or Winter, from the appropriate the manufacturer's instructions. The heating will not work if the time has been changed for heating off time. You have not water control. The water heating will not work if the system is not set to work. Check that the hot water has reached the correct temperature.

WHAT IS A ROOM THERMOSTAT?

...an Explanation for Householders (as recommended by the Energy Savings Trust)

A room thermostat controls the heating system in an off or on manner. It works by sensing the air temperature existing in the room when the air temperature falls below the demand setting, and switching it on when the air temperature has risen to a set point. Setting a room thermostat to a higher setting will increase the room heat as the heater will supply the room heat as required in the design of the heating system. For example, the use of a room thermostat, together with the setting of the boiler, supply the room heat. Setting a room thermostat to a lower setting will result in the room being controlled at a lower temperature, and saving energy. The heating system will not work if a time period is programmed has been set off. The way to set and use your room thermostat is to set the lowest temperature setting for the room comfortable with, and then leave it alone to do its job. The best way to do this is to set the room thermostat to a low temperature - say 16°C - and then turn it up to the degree that you wish you are comfortable with the temperature. You must never adjust the thermostat further. Any adjustment above the setting will waste energy and cost you more money.

If your heating system is a boiler with radiators, there will usually be only one room thermostat to control the whole house. As you can have different temperatures in different rooms by setting thermostats on other rooms (other than individual radiators). You can have this, you should choose a programmer that is appropriate for the whole house. If you have this, you can choose a night regime setting to make sure that with the boiler room is continuous, this prevents any unnecessary higher costs by reducing the flow.

Room thermostats need a free flow of air to sense the temperature. In this must not be covered by curtains, it is exposed to draughts, it is covered by the furniture, and it is also covered by the room's heat source.

Energy Efficiency and the Environment

Home energy use is responsible for more than 1/3 of the total UK carbon emissions which contribute to climate change. Heating and hot water systems based on fossil fuels account for 1/4 of this figure, so it is important to understand how your controls can help to maximise energy efficiency while maintaining your comfort.

Your Programmer should be used in conjunction with appropriate temperature controls. In order to save energy the following general points should be observed:

1. Ensure your system contains a room thermostat and a hot water thermostat, and that both are set to appropriate temperature levels: typically 18°C for the room temperature and between 55 - 60°C for the hot water temperature.
2. Programme your heating and hot water to be off when you are not in the house. If you are concerned about possible heat damage to any exposed pipework, it is advisable to fit a hot protection system - your installer can advise you about this.
3. Think about how you use your domestic hot water - if you have a storage system, it is not necessary to have this switched on all the time, even when you are in the house.
4. Consider the heat up time required for your central heating. Every home responds differently when the heating is switched on. Adjust the start time so that you are not cold when you get up in the morning. A longer heat up time is required for other heating periods.
5. In the evening, when the house is up to temperature, it is often possible to switch off the heating up to an hour before you go to bed, without any noticeable reduction in comfort.
