Public Outcry
Leads Va. To Continue K-3
SAT History
Testing

By Samuel E. Davis

Virginia's decision to continue testing students in kindergarten through third grade on the state history exam has been met with a wave of public outcry. Parents and educators across the state have expressed concern over the exam's content, which includes questions about the treatment of Native Americans and the role of slavery in the state's history. The exam is a mandatory part of the state's curriculum, and the results are used to evaluate schools and teachers. The controversy has led to a series of public hearings and a petition drive to change the exam. The state's Department of Education has responded by stating that the exam is a necessary part of the curriculum and that it will continue to be used.

New Campaign
Highlights
AIDS Testing

By Samuel E. Davis

The new campaign highlights the importance of getting tested for HIV and AIDS. It features a series of posters and videos that show people of various ages and backgrounds getting tested. The campaign is a joint effort between the state and the federal government, and it is designed to reach as many people as possible. The goal is to reduce the number of new HIV infections and to increase the number of people who are aware of their status.
