and you erode the personal In the global economic crash of recent years it has been people who have been under assault not just financial value The vulnerability of a society shaped solely by economic and monetised transactions is exposed when the economy and the monetisation of everything fails When the economic machine seizes up it is people who are devalued and dumped Drawing upon his experience in government education and the Church the author asks Must we be a market society as well as a market economy Can we devise a non economic account of describing human value and worth Christopher Steed argues that the really important issues that frame the contemporary human situation are those that cannot be measured Quality is also vital to human flourishing what after all is wealth for In this timely and important work the author calls for a wider concept of value one that encompasses both economic value and human value and for a society that cultivates the importance of the human

Education and Social Inequalities Richard Waller,Nicola Ingram,Michael Ward,2017-08-09 A university education has long been seen as the gateway to upward social mobility for individuals from lower socio economic backgrounds and as a way of reproducing social advantage for the better off With the number of young people from the very highest socio economic groups entering university in the UK having effectively been at saturation point for several decades the expansion witnessed in participation rates over the last few decades has largely been achieved by a modest broadening of the base of the undergraduate population in terms of both social class and ethnic diversity However a growing body of evidence exists in the continuation of unequal graduate outcomes This can be seen in terms of employment trajectories in the UK The issue of just who enjoys access to which university and the experiences and outcomes of graduates from different institutions remain central to questions of social justice notably higher education s contribution to social mobility and to the reproduction of social inequality This collection of contemporary original writings explores these issues in a range of specific contexts and through employing a range of theoretical and methodological approaches The relationship between higher education and social mobility has probably never been under closer scrutiny This volume will appeal to academics policy makers and commentators alike Higher Education and Social Inequalities is an important contribution to the public and academic debate inspiration for further research as well as practical applications in this area Tribalism and Political Power in the Gulf Courtney Freer, Alanoud al-Sharekh, 2021-09-23 Gulf societies are often described as being intensely tribal. However, in discussions of state building and national identity, the role of tribalism and tribal identity is often overlooked. This book analyses the political role of tribes in Kuwait, Qatar, and the UAE, aiming to understand the degree to which tribes hinder or advance popular participation in government and to what extent they exert domestic political power. The research traces the historical relationship between ruling elites and nomadic tribes and, by constructing political histories of these states and analysing the role of tribes in domestic political life and social hierarchies, reveals how they serve as major political actors in the Gulf. A key focus of the book is understanding the extent to which societies in the Gulf have become re-bedouinised in the modern era and how this has shaped these states' political processes and institutions. The book explores the roles that tribes play in the development of progressive citizenship regimes and policymaking today and how they are likely to be influential in the future within rentier environments.
