1. Abstract The purpose of this study was to investigate the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of sedentary middle-aged men. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The participants were divided into two groups: a training group and a control group. The training group performed a 12-week program of aerobic and resistance training, while the control group remained sedentary. The primary outcome was the change in HRQL, measured using the SF-36 questionnaire. Secondary outcomes included changes in physical fitness, body composition, and blood pressure. The results showed that the training group had significantly higher scores on the SF-36 questionnaire at the end of the 12-week period compared to the control group. Additionally, the training group showed significant improvements in physical fitness, body composition, and blood pressure. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve HRQL and physical fitness in sedentary middle-aged men.
