Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week. The control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The primary outcome was the change in the 6-minute walk test (6MWT) distance. Secondary outcomes included changes in heart rate, blood pressure, body mass index (BMI), and health-related quality of life (HRQL). The 6MWT distance increased significantly in the intervention group compared to the control group. There were no significant differences in heart rate, blood pressure, BMI, or HRQL between the two groups. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve physical fitness and HRQL in sedentary, middle-aged women.
