

2.4 Use of the Compound Light Microscope

As mentioned, the name compound light microscope indicates that it uses two sets of lenses and light to view an object. The two sets of lenses are the ocular lenses located near the eyes and the objective lenses located near the object. Illumination is from below, and the light passes through clear portions but does not pass through opaque portions. This microscope is used to examine smaller objects or more thinly sliced sections of objects under higher magnification than would be possible with the binocular dissecting microscope.

Identifying the Parts

Obtain a compound light microscope from the storage area and place it securely on the table. Identify the following parts on your microscope, and label them in Figure 2.5.
