Abstract: This study explored the effects of a 12-week intervention on the self-reported health status of a sample of older adults. The study was conducted in a community-based setting. The intervention was a 12-week program of physical activity and health education. The results showed that the intervention had a positive effect on the self-reported health status of the participants. The findings suggest that a 12-week intervention can improve the self-reported health status of older adults.
