Why is experimental design important?

It allows scientists to determine if the results of an experiment are due to the independent variable or to other factors.

What are the components of an experiment?

- Independent Variable: The variable that is being tested or manipulated.
- Dependent Variable: The variable that is being measured or observed.
- Control Group: A group that is not receiving the treatment or intervention.
- Experimental Group: A group that is receiving the treatment or intervention.

How do you design an experiment?

4. Conduct the experiment.
5. Analyze the results.
6. Draw conclusions.

What are some common mistakes in experimental design?

- Sampling Bias: A sample that is not representative of the population.
- Observer Bias: A bias in the observation of the results.

How do you interpret the results of an experiment?

Compare the results of the experimental group to the results of the control group. If there is a significant difference, then the independent variable may have caused the change.
