

Chapter Eleven Marriage and Family

- What is the family
  - The family is two or more people who are committed to each other over time, sharing intimacy, resources, decision-making responsibilities, and values, and assuming responsibility for the care of children
  - Family structures and patterns vary tremendously across cultures
  - Extended family- consisting of parents, dependent children, and other relatives
  - The nuclear family consists of one or two parents and the children
  - Monogamy is marriage to one spouse at a time
  - Polygamy is marriage to more than one spouse at a time
    - Takes two forms
      - Polygyny- a family where a man can marry more than one woman at a time
      - Polyandry- a family where a woman can marry more than one husband at a time
  - Kinship refers to family ties established through marriage or lines of descent
  - Marriage is the socially acknowledged and approved sexual union between two adults
- Theoretical analysis
- The functionalist perspective
  - Functionalists begin by looking at the four primary tasks the family performs in every society
    - Socialization
    - Regulation of sexual behaviour and reproduction
    - Social placement
    - Protection, affection, and companionship
  - Functionalists are most likely to argue the family is “declining or breaking down” and would be interested in the long-term consequences of this decline on the stability of society
- The conflict perspective
