

2018 SAC Response Guide

1) Define the term state as it applies to the study of global politics. (2 marks)

Mark scheme:

- 1 mark for accurately defining the term state
- 1 mark for elaboration, supporting explanation or examples of how the term applies to global politics

Sample response: The state is a political entity which possesses a permanent population, defined territory, recognised sovereignty and an effective government. They are the dominant and primary actors in global politics, and are often members of intergovernmental organisations like the United Nations (UN).

2) Using an example, explain how regional organisations can challenge state sovereignty. (4 marks)

Mark scheme:

- 1 mark for identifying the relationship between states and regional organisations
- 1 mark for identifying how regional organisations can challenge sovereignty
- 1-2 marks for providing relevant examples and supporting evidence

Sample response: Regional organisations are groupings of states that pool their sovereignty in the hope that the regional organisation will be more powerful and bring benefits to member states. However, in doing so, states agree to give up some of their sovereignty. For example, the European Union (EU) has several agreements which undermine the sovereignty of member states. For example, EU members cannot restrict the free movement of people, goods, services and capital across their borders, if these come from one of the other 27 EU member states. This contributed to the decision of the United Kingdom to leave the EU in 2016, as politicians supporting the "Leave" campaign argued that this had led to 3.5 million predominantly poor, Eastern European citizens settling in the UK, thus undermining wages and placing pressure on social services.

3) Explain the role of intergovernmental organisations in global politics. (3 marks)

Mark scheme:

- 1 mark for defining at least one role of intergovernmental organisations in global politics (e.g. to facilitate cooperation between states or to manage relations between states)
- 1-2 marks for identifying relevant examples (e.g. UN, IMF, ICC) and supplying examples of activities undertaken to pursue these roles

Sample response: Intergovernmental organisations (IGOs) are tasked with facilitating cooperation and maintaining relations between states. For instance, the UN General Assembly provides a forum for its member states to express their views, which leads to greater cooperation in responding to challenges like climate change. Conversely, the International Court of Justice arbitrates disputes between states – such as the 2013 ruling on the Preah Vihear border dispute between Thailand and Cambodia, which interpreted treaties and rules governing borders, and helped ensure a peaceful relationship between the two states.
