THE MEDIEVAL EUROPEAN FEUDAL SYSTEM History Reading

At the end of the Western Roman Empire in 476 C.E., Europe entered a period known as the Middle Ages. This 1,000-year era in European history is characterized by population growth, particularly in urban centers, in addition to decreases in trade, literature, and cultural life. The Middle Ages were marked by peace, and others by consistent warfare, plagues, social unrest, and revolts. Yet, one consistency of the era was that the lack of a strong central government in Europe created a sense of disorder with limited or no laws and protections. Therefore, in order to retain their power and wealth, lords and nobles created the feudal system, a system of reciprocal military and economic obligations that defined much of the way of life during the Middle Ages. It should be understood that feudalism was not applied uniformly across the entire period, as differences in laws and customs varied across both time and place. Furthermore, as differences in laws and customs varied across both time and place, the term feudalism was not in use by those who lived under the system, but instead developed later by scholars such as Adam Smith who was looking to describe and categorize the system.

The concept of feudalism exists; therefore, academics frequently disagree on a precise definition. Nonetheless, feudalism can best be understood as a series of reciprocal military, economic, and cultural obligations that defined much of the way of life during the Middle Ages. It should be understood that feudalism was not applied uniformly across the entire period, as differences in laws and customs varied across both time and place. Furthermore, as differences in laws and customs varied across both time and place, the term feudalism was not in use by those who lived under the system, but instead developed later by scholars such as Adam Smith who was looking to describe and categorize the system.

In medieval kingdoms, lords and nobles provided land, known as fief, to knights and vassals in exchange for their military service. The knights and vassals were known as vassals. A fief was a large area of land, known as a fief, which the vassal pledged their submission and allegiance to the lord. In exchange for land, the lord provided the vassal with protection and a place to live. The vassal provided the lord with military service, and the lord provided the vassal with protection and a place to live. The vassal provided the lord with military service, and the lord provided the vassal with protection and a place to live.
