Chemistry of Structure-Function Relationships in Cheese Edyth L. Malin, Michael H. Tunick, 2013-11-11

Although the art of making cheese can be traced to prehistoric times it has continued to evolve as modern civilization progressed The advent of new technologies and instrumentation has brought exponential growth in the understanding of cheese components and their function Even more recently the evolution of cheesemaking has accelerated driven by economic factors such as the establishment of the European Economic Community the changing diet of developed countries and the environmental and economic concerns associated with whey disposal Molecular biology has revolutionized the development of starter and adjunct cultures as well as rennets and genetics will make it possible to maintain ideal milk components for cheesemaking The ability to accelerate traditional ripening procedures has altered the production of certain cheeses and the emphasis on decreasing the intake of dietary fat especially in the United States has prompted the development of technology for producing low fat cheeses with traditional texture and flavor In assembling a distinguished group of participants for the symposium Chemistry of the Structure Function Relationships in Cheese we hoped to review the interplay of these trends and forecast the direction of future research Contributors evaluated the current status of cheesemaking and highlighted the information that will be essential for new developments They also focused the attention of agricultural and food chemists on the opportunities in cheese research and the potential contributions they might make to the future of cheese a most valuable food product We are indebted to Dr Patrick Fox Dr Mark Johnson Dr Milos Kalab Dr
