This book examines the interconnectedness between religion education and human rights from an international perspective using an interdisciplinary approach. It deals with compulsory or secondary school education in different contexts as well as higher education and has as its common theme the multiplicity of secularisms in different national contexts. Presenting rich cases, the contributions include empirical and theoretical perspectives on how international trends of migration and cultural diversity as well as judicialization of social and political processes and rapid religious and social changes come into play as societies find their way in an increasingly diverse context. The book contains chapters that present case studies on how confessional or non-confessional Religious Education (RE) at schools in different societal contexts is related to the concept of universal human rights. It presents case studies that display an intriguing array of problems that point to the role of religion in the public sphere and show that historical contexts play important and different roles. Other contributions deal with higher education where one questions how human rights as a concept and as discourse is taught and examines whether withdrawing from certain clinical training when in university education to become a medical doctor or a midwife on the grounds of conscientious objections can be claimed as a human right. From a judicial point of view, one chapter discerns the construction of the concept of religion in the Swedish Education Act in relation to the Swedish constitution as well as European legislation. Finally, an empirical study comparing data from young people in six different countries in three continents investigates factors that explain attitudes towards human rights.

Who's who in Economics Mark Blaug, 1986 This edition includes 337 more entries bringing the total to over 1,400 thumbnail sketches of economists who have contributed to the literature over the past three centuries. Whitaker's Book List, 1991

Does Economic Space Matter? Hiroshi Ohta, 1993-09-15 This is a Festschrift to honour Professor Melvin Greenhut who has long toiled on spatial economics. The book accordingly focuses on a single question: in what sense does economic space matter in economic theory? Space in economics is an elusive concept, apparently separating and embracing economic agents at the same time. This is why adding it to already overly complicated economic agents at the same time. This is why adding it to already overly complicated economic models may not necessarily help economics to become sufficiently realistic. In this book, leading scholars of international stature try to find ways of introducing space in economic theory which will make it simpler and more realistic, analysing theoretical and historical issues of contemporary relevance such as land use, congestion and public goods, location theory and spatial competition.
