many low and middle income countries have experimented with health insurance options While their plans have varied widely in scale and ambition their goals are the same to make health services more affordable through the use of public subsidies while also moving care providers partially or fully into competitive markets Colombia embarked in 1993 on a fifteen year effort to cover its entire population with insurance in combination with greater freedom to choose among providers A decade later Mexico followed suit with a program tailored to its federal system Several African nations have introduced new programs in the past decade and many are testing options for reform For the past twenty years Eastern Europe has been shifting from government run care to insurance based competitive systems and both China and India have experimental programs to expand coverage These nations are betting that insurance based health care financing can increase the accessibility of services increase providers productivity and change the population s health care use patterns mirroring the development of health systems in most OECD countries Until now however we have known little about the actual effects of these dramatic policy changes Understanding the impact of health insurance based care is key to the public policy debate of whether to extend insurance to low income populations and if so how to do it or to serve them through other means Using recent household data this book presents evidence of the impact of insurance programs in China Colombia Costa Rica Ghana Indonesia Namibia and Peru The contributors also discuss potential design improvements that could increase impact They provide innovative insights on improving the evaluation of health insurance reforms and on building a robust knowledge base to guide policy as other countries tackle the health insurance challenge
