

1. Introduction

1.1. Overview of the project
1.2. Objectives and Scope

2. Methodology

2.1. Research Design

The research design for this study is a qualitative approach, focusing on understanding the experiences and perceptions of participants. The study is exploratory in nature, aiming to identify key themes and issues related to the research topic. The data collection method involves semi-structured interviews, which allow for a degree of flexibility in the questions asked, while still maintaining a structured framework. The sample size is small, consisting of 10 participants, which is typical for qualitative research. The data analysis is conducted using thematic analysis, which involves identifying and organizing data into themes that represent different aspects of the research topic.

2.2. Data Collection

Data collection was conducted through semi-structured interviews with 10 participants. The interviews were audio-recorded and lasted approximately 45 minutes each. The participants were recruited through purposive sampling, ensuring a range of experiences and perspectives were included in the study.

2.3. Data Analysis

The data analysis was conducted using thematic analysis. This involves identifying and organizing data into themes that represent different aspects of the research topic. The themes were identified through a process of coding and categorization, guided by the research objectives and the research design.

2.4. Ethical Approval

The study was given ethical approval by the local research ethics committee. All participants gave informed consent before taking part in the study. The study was designed to minimize any potential risks to participants, and the data was stored securely and confidentially.

2.5. Limitations

The study has several limitations. The small sample size may limit the generalizability of the findings. The qualitative nature of the data may also limit the ability to make statistical inferences. The study was also limited by the time and resources available for data collection and analysis.

Despite these limitations, the study provides valuable insights into the experiences and perceptions of participants. The findings are discussed in detail in the next section.
