Figure 1 illustrates the proposed algorithm. The proposed algorithm can be divided into two main parts: (1) feature selection and (2) model training. The feature selection part is divided into two sub-parts: (a) feature selection based on the correlation coefficient and (b) feature selection based on the mutual information. The model training part is divided into two sub-parts: (c) model training based on the correlation coefficient and (d) model training based on the mutual information. The correlation coefficient is used to measure the linear relationship between the features and the target variable. The mutual information is used to measure the non-linear relationship between the features and the target variable. The proposed algorithm is evaluated on a dataset of 1000 samples and 10 features. The results show that the proposed algorithm outperforms the baseline algorithm in terms of accuracy and F1 score.
