Abstract. Staphylococcus aureus is the most frequent cause of nosocomial infection, and the use of antibiotics has led to the development of strains resistant to many drugs. The aim of this study was to determine the prevalence of methicillin-resistant strains of S. aureus in the intensive care unit (ICU) of a tertiary care hospital. A total of 100 strains of S. aureus were isolated from patients in the ICU, and 10% were found to be methicillin-resistant.

Abstract
The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The program included a combination of aerobic and strength training exercises. The results of the study showed that the women who participated in the program experienced significant improvements in their physical and psychological health. The program was found to be effective in improving cardiovascular fitness, muscle strength, and body composition. Additionally, the program was found to be effective in reducing stress and improving mood. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can be an effective means of improving the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
