Chapter 10 Energy Model

Below are the following questions using biological information. Use your knowledge and understanding of the cell membrane. This document is intended to help you practice for the exam effort you put into completing this study guide document.

1. Describe the following terms: selective permeability, transporters, channels, and osmosis. Describe the following: osmosis, isotonic, and hypertonic solutions. Describe the following: the cell membrane, the cell wall, and the cytoplasm.
Osmosis is a type of passive transport that involves the movement of water across a semipermeable membrane from an area of high water potential to an area of low water potential.
2. Describe the importance and function of the cell membrane in controlling the flow of materials into and out of the cell.
The cell membrane is a phospholipid bilayer that acts as a barrier between the cell and its environment. It is selectively permeable, meaning that it allows some substances to pass through while blocking others.
3. Explain the following terms: transporters, channels, and osmosis. Describe the following: the cell membrane, the cell wall, and the cytoplasm.
Transporters are proteins that move substances across the cell membrane. Channels are proteins that provide a pathway for substances to pass through the cell membrane. Osmosis is the movement of water across a semipermeable membrane from an area of high water potential to an area of low water potential.
4. Explain the difference between osmosis and diffusion.
Osmosis is the movement of water across a semipermeable membrane from an area of high water potential to an area of low water potential. Diffusion is the movement of any substance from an area of high concentration to an area of low concentration.
5. Explain the role of the cell membrane in controlling the flow of materials into and out of the cell.
The cell membrane is a phospholipid bilayer that acts as a barrier between the cell and its environment. It is selectively permeable, meaning that it allows some substances to pass through while blocking others. The cell membrane also contains transporters and channels that move substances across the membrane. The cell membrane is also involved in cell signaling and cell adhesion.
6. Explain the difference between osmosis and diffusion.
Osmosis is the movement of water across a semipermeable membrane from an area of high water potential to an area of low water potential. Diffusion is the movement of any substance from an area of high concentration to an area of low concentration.
7. Explain the following problems that large and small molecules face. Describe the following: the cell membrane, the cell wall, and the cytoplasm.
Large molecules face the problem of being too big to pass through the cell membrane. Small molecules face the problem of being too small to pass through the cell membrane. The cell membrane is a phospholipid bilayer that acts as a barrier between the cell and its environment. It is selectively permeable, meaning that it allows some substances to pass through while blocking others. The cell membrane also contains transporters and channels that move substances across the membrane. The cell membrane is also involved in cell signaling and cell adhesion.
