

Barriers to Trade

The harmonization of national export and import policies has led to a system wherein all the goods of governments have the same international-trade possibilities for the benefit of their own economies. Over the last 50 years, there have been various international trade wars, with significant damage being done to the economies of many nations. Examples of these wars include the General International Trade Agreement of 1947, the World Trade Organization (WTO) in the 1990s, the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) in 1994, and the European Union (EU) in 1993.

However, rather than harmonizing the economic situation among free-trade nations that resulted in the 1940s, the post-1940s adjustments to Article XXIV of the General Trade Agreement (the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) have been increasingly done in a protectionist atmosphere with self-interest. The economic supply of a commodity between domestic suppliers and foreign suppliers at different prices is shown in Figure 5.1. Domestic suppliers are shown in Figure 5.1. The equilibrium price resulting from domestic production alone, P_1 , would be produced only by domestic firms.

Domestic Trade

It shows a free international-trade free Total Supply harmonization, the production of domestic goods and services is shown in Figure 5.1. Domestic supply is shown at P_1 and quantity Q_1 . There are also domestic demand and domestic supply. Also at P_1 , domestic demand is shown at Q_2 and domestic supply is shown at Q_3 . Thus, domestic firms are producing less than domestic supply, which would be the case if there were no international trade.
