The International Handbook of Educational Research in the Asia-Pacific Region J.P. Keeves, Ryo Watanabe, 2013-11-11 The aim of the Handbook is to present readily accessible but scholarly sources of information about educational research in the Asia Pacific region The scale and scope of the Handbook is such that the articles included in it provide substantive contributions to knowledge and understanding of education in the Asia region In so doing the articles present the problems and issues facing education in the region and the findings of research conducted within the region that contribute to the resolution of these problems and issues Moreover since new problems and issues are constantly arising the articles in the Handbook also indicate the likely directions of future developments The different articles within the Handbook seek to conceptualize the problems in each specific content area under review provide an integration of the research conducted within that area the theoretical basis of the research the practical implications of the research and the contribution of the research towards the resolution of the problems identified Thus the articles do not involve the reporting of newly conducted research but rather require a synthesis of the research undertaken in a particular area with reference to the research methods employed and the theoretical frameworks on which the research is based In general the articles do not advocate a single point of view but rather present alternative points of view and comment on the debate and disagreements associated with the conduct and findings of the research Furthermore it should be noted that the Handbook is not concerned with research methodology and only considers the methods employed in inquiry in so far as the particular methods of research contribute to the effective investigation of problems and issues that have arisen in the conduct and provision of education at different levels within the region

Telling Tales Over Time Joel Weiss, Robert S. Brown, 2013-06-13 How do calendars and clocks influence considerations of school effectiveness From the creation of compulsory education to the future of virtual schooling Weiss and Brown trace two centuries of school practices policies and research linking the concept of time with opportunity to learn School calendars and clocks are shaped by both the physical and social worlds and the clock of schooling is shown to be one of the great clocks of society that helps to frame school effectiveness School time does not operate in a vacuum but within curriculum teaching and learning situations The phrase chrono curriculum was devised by the authors as a metaphor for exploring issues of school effectiveness within the time dimension Using American and Canadian sources stories are created to illustrate four themes about time and school effectiveness The first three stories utilize access attendance and testing as criteria associated with these eras of schooling How will the story read in the fourth era the digital age which forces us to a reconsideration of time and its influence on education Quoting David Berliner in his Foreword this is an opportune time for these authors to bring us insights into the reasons we in North America created our public school systems and how the chrono curriculum influences those systems The authors presentation of our educational past provides educators a chance to think anew about how we might do schooling in our own times

Handbook of Research in Pediatric and Clinical Child Psychology Dennis Drotar, 2013-11-11 The professional development of researchers is critical for the future development of the fields of pediatric and clinical child psychology In order to conduct research in pediatric and clinical child psychology researchers need to work with a wide range of populations and master an increasingly wide range of skills many of which are either not formally taught or considered in sufficient depth in clinical training Such skills include the development of resources for research by writing grants to government agencies and foundations skills in preparing research for publications concerning original research review articles or case reports scientific presentation skills the ability to review and edit scientific manuscripts and to implement and manage research in applied settings Moreover the increasing complexity of research in pediatric and clinical child psychology requires successful researchers in these fields to develop their expertise with a wide range of new specialized methodologies data analytic methods models of data analysis and methods of assessment Finally to enhance the relevance of their research to practice researchers in pediatric and clinical child psychology need to integrate their work with clinical service delivery programs that are based on empirical research The necessity to train researchers in pediatric and clinical child psychology in such multifaceted knowledge and skills places extraordinary burdens on professional training programs Professional researchers in pediatric and clinical child psychology also are challenged to develop new knowledge and skills through continuing education and faculty development programs energy and water resources to natural disasters and from changing climatic patterns to the evolution of the Earth's deep interior geoscience research affects people's lives in many ways and on many levels. This book offers a stimulating cross-disciplinary perspective on the important relationship between geoscience research and outreach activities for schools and for the general public. The contributors academics, research scientists, science educators and outreach program educators describe and evaluate outreach programs from around the world. A section entitled Field-based Approaches includes a chapter describing an initiative to engage Alaskan communities and students in research and another on problem-based learning in the field setting. The Online Approaches section discusses ways to connect students and scientists using online forums, use of the web and social media including the United Nations University and its experience with the design of a web magazine featuring geoscience research and video clips on marine geoscience created by students and scientists. The section on Workshop and Laboratory-based Approaches includes a chapter on teaching geochronology to high school students and another describing an extracurricular school activity program on meteorology. The Program Design section presents chapters on Integrating Geoscience Research in Primary and Secondary Education on ways to bridge research with science education at the high school level and on use of online geoscience data from the Great Lakes. The concluding section Promoting Research-enhanced Outreach offers chapters on Geoscience Outreach Education with the local community by a leading research-intensive university and on the use of research to promote action in Earth science professional development for schoolteachers. Geoscience Research and Outreach: Schools and Public Engagement will benefit geoscience researchers who wish to promote their work beyond academia. It offers guidance to those seeking research funding from agencies which increasingly request detailed plans for outreach activities in research proposals. Policymakers, educators and scientists working in museums, learned societies and public organizations who wish to widen participation will also find this book useful. Together with the companion volume Geoscience Research and Education: Teaching at Universities, this book showcases the key role that geoscience research plays in a wide spectrum of educational settings.

Taking Aviation to New Heights

Jacqueline Cardinal, Laurent Lapierre, 2013-11-19. A fascinating biography of Pierre Jeannerot, the man who was at the helm of Air Canada, IATA and the aviation industry. Taking Aviation to New Heights is a compelling case study of how a business man was born and went on to achieve financial success, social status and political sway.

Modeling and Measuring

Competencies in Higher Education Sigrid Blömeke, Olga Zlatkin-Troitschanskaia, Christiane Kuhn, Judith Fege, 2013-04-20. Measuring competencies acquired over the course of higher education is an area of research that largely has been neglected. This deficit can be attributed to the complexity of academic competencies since the variety of institutions, programs, occupational fields and job requirements render it difficult to define and even harder to measure outcomes. Thus, assessing the preconditions for and effects of competency development is a challenge methodologically. In this book, a comprehensive review of the international state of research on modeling and measuring competencies in higher education across several academic disciplines is presented along with an evaluation of the field's strengths and weaknesses. Renowned experts share insight into the most important recent research projects and point out controversies and challenges. Competencies are regarded as context-specific dispositions acquired and required to cope successfully with domain-specific situations and tasks. However, the range of these dispositions is controversial. Should only cognitive facets be included, or is it important to consider attitudes as well? Insufficient response rates and panel attrition are further challenges, as are the limitations of paper and pencil approaches to the complex measurement of higher education outcomes. Thus, this book may serve as a platform for the exchange of research experiences and perspectives and hopefully will instigate improvements in research into higher education.

Family and School Capital: Towards a Context Theory of Students' School Outcomes K.

Marjoribanks, 2013-03-14 One of the persistent challenges confronting societies is how to reduce inequalities in the educational and occupational attainment of students from different socio-economic, ethnic, and race group backgrounds. This book represents a major advance in examining such educational problems. From an analysis of international investigations of family and school influences, a context theory of students' school outcomes is developed. This work brings together wonderful summaries of research and adds new insights from the author's own investigations. One of its substantial attributes is that it integrates qualitative and quantitative research orientations and methodologies, which is a major step forward in educational and social science research. A set of family and school measures is included that might be used by researchers and students as they examine the context theory and by educators involved in school reform programs. This book will have a great appeal not only for students and researchers in educational fields but also for scholars in many other social science disciplines.

Science Education for Diversity Nasser Mansour, Rupert Wegerif, 2013-06-18 Reflecting the very latest theory on diversity issues in science education, including new dialogic approaches, this volume explores the subject from a range of perspectives and draws on studies from around the world. The work discusses fundamental topics such as how we conceptualize diversity as well as examining the ways in which heterogeneous cultural constructs influence the teaching and learning of science in a range of contexts. Including numerous strategies ready for adoption by interested teachers, the book addresses the varied cultural factors that influence engagement with science education. It seeks answers to the question of why increasing numbers of students fail to connect with science education in schools and looks at the more subtle impact that students' individually constructed identities have on the teaching and learning of science. Recognizing the diversity of its audience, the book covers differing levels and science subjects and examines material from a range of viewpoints that include pedagogy, curricula, teacher education, learning, gender, religion, and ICT, as well as those of in-service and trainee teachers at all levels.

Contexts of Competence Margie Berns, 2013-06-29 The introduction of communicative competence as the goal of second and foreign language teaching has led to recognition of the role of context in language learning and use. As communicative competence is defined by the social and cultural contexts in which it is used, no single communicative competence can serve as the goal and model for all learners This recognition has had an impact on program design and materials development One significant change is that the choice of a teaching method is no longer the primary concern Instead the first step for the program designer is becoming familiar with the social and cultural features of the context of the language being taught This includes a consideration of the uses speakers make of the language their reasons for using it and their attitudes toward it Contexts of Competence Social and Cultural Considerations in Communicative Language Teaching explores the relationship between context and competence from a theoretical and practical perspective Its audience is applied linguists in general and language teaching practitioners in particular The overall aim of its five chapters is to provide a framework for consideration of various contexts of language learning and use and to guide the implementation and development of models of communicative language teaching that are responsive to the context specific needs of learners

Handbook of Adolescent Health Risk Behavior Ralph J. DiClemente, William B. Hansen, Lynn E. Ponton, 2013-11-21

Adolescence is a developmental period of accelerating physical psychological social cultural and cognitive development often characterized by confronting and surmounting a myriad of challenges and establishing a sense of self identity and autonomy It is also unfortunately a period fraught with many threats to the health and well being of adolescents and with substantial consequent impairment and disability Many of the adverse health consequences experienced by adolescents are to a large extent the result of their risk behaviors Many adolescents today and perhaps an increasing number in the future are at risk for death disease and other adverse health outcomes that are not primarily biomedical in origin In general there has been a marked change in the causes of morbidity and mortality among adolescents Previously infectious diseases accounted for a disproportionate share of adolescent morbidity and mortality At present however the overwhelming toll of adolescent morbidity and mortality is the result of lifestyle practices

The School Reform Landscape Christopher H. Tienken, Donald C. Orlich, 2013-02-22 The School Reform Landscape Fear Mythologies and Lies describes this nation's policymakers awkwardly stumbling through education reforms based on highly questionable political ideology and high stakes assessments for all children Provided are a series of actions that use fear and very unsound research studies to eliminate the American school systems and replace them with a dual system which discriminates against the poor handicapped and students with little social capital The authors provide a series of needed actions to make American public education the best it can be
