Mapping and the Citizen Sensor Giles Foody, Linda

See, Steffen Fritz, Peter Mooney, Ana-Maria Olteanu-Raimond, Cidália Costa Fonte, Vyron Antoniou, 2017-09-11 Maps are a fundamental resource in a diverse array of applications ranging from everyday activities such as route planning through the legal demarcation of space to scientific studies such as those seeking to understand biodiversity and inform the design of nature reserves for species conservation For a map to have value it should provide an accurate and timely representation of the phenomenon depicted and this can be a challenge in a dynamic world Fortunately mapping activities have benefitted greatly from recent advances in geoinformation technologies Satellite remote sensing for example now offers unparalleled data acquisition and authoritative mapping agencies have developed systems for the routine production of maps in accordance with strict standards Until recently much mapping activity was in the exclusive realm of authoritative agencies but technological development has also allowed the rise of the amateur mapping community The proliferation of inexpensive and highly mobile and location aware devices together with Web 2.0 technology have fostered the emergence of the citizen as a source of data Mapping presently benefits from vast amounts of spatial data as well as people able to provide observations of geographic phenomena which can inform map production revision and evaluation The great potential of these developments is however often limited by concerns The latter span issues from the nature of the citizens through the way data are collected and shared to the quality and trustworthiness of the data This book reports on some of the key issues connected with the use of citizen sensors in mapping It arises from a European Co operation in Science and Technology COST Action which explored issues linked to topics ranging from citizen motivation data acquisition data quality and the use of citizen derived data in the production of maps that rival and sometimes surpass maps arising from authoritative agencies

Encounters in the Rubble Erica J. Lansberg, 2025-08-12 The US occupation of Germany after World War II was a time in which encounters between American soldiers and young German civilians were especially ubiquitous Overall German children and youth played a fundamental role in the US occupation impacting both personal and political relations Using a blend of sources ranging from German children's diaries to official US military records this work provides a wide reaching examination of the youngest civilians under occupation in the postwar aftermath of the Nazi regime It centers on the personal experiences of both German children and American military personnel during the occupation and also examines the ways that young Germans impacted transatlantic policies especially in the context of the emerging Cold War including during the Berlin Airlift This work thus considers the youngest members of the occupied German population as important historical actors during a time of major transition from war to peace marked by encounters made in the rubble
