Review Questions
What are the general goals for gross value added (GDP) and GNP? (Answer 1)

1. What are the general goals for gross value added (GDP) and GNP? (Answer 1)
The general goals for GDP and GNP are to provide a measure of the total value of goods and services produced in a country. GDP is the value of all final goods and services produced within a country's borders, while GNP is the value of all final goods and services produced by a country's residents, regardless of where they are produced.

2. Is gross value added always a good indicator of a country's economic health? (Answer 2)
Gross value added is not always a good indicator of a country's economic health. It is a measure of the total value of goods and services produced, but it does not take into account the quality of those goods and services, or the distribution of income among the population.

3. What are the limitations of GDP and GNP? (Answer 3)
The limitations of GDP and GNP are that they do not measure the quality of goods and services, the distribution of income, or the sustainability of economic growth. They also do not take into account the value of unpaid work, such as household production and volunteer work.
