Abstract: This paper examines the impact of the 1997-1998 Asian financial crisis on the performance of the Asian stock markets. The results show that the Asian stock markets experienced a significant decline in performance during the crisis period. The decline was more pronounced in the Asian emerging markets than in the Asian developed markets. The results also show that the Asian stock markets experienced a significant increase in volatility during the crisis period. The increase in volatility was more pronounced in the Asian emerging markets than in the Asian developed markets. The results suggest that the Asian stock markets are highly sensitive to the Asian financial crisis.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the cardiovascular and muscular fitness of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were 15 men, aged 40 to 55 years, who were sedentary and had no history of cardiovascular disease. They were randomly assigned to either a training or a control group. The training group performed a 12-week program of aerobic and resistance training, while the control group remained sedentary. The results showed that the training group had significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, as measured by maximal heart rate and maximal oxygen consumption, and muscular fitness, as measured by maximal voluntary contraction of the leg muscles. The control group showed no significant changes in these measures. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve cardiovascular and muscular fitness in sedentary, middle-aged men.
