Describe some common disorders of the endocrine system?

Diabetes Diabetes mellitus is a chronic disease that results in failure to release and/or produce insulin properly enough insulin is needed for sugar to enter the cells. In type 1 diabetes, the body's immune system attacks the insulin-producing cells in the pancreas, destroying them. In type 2 diabetes, the body's cells become resistant to insulin, and the pancreas cannot produce enough insulin to overcome the resistance. Diabetes is a leading cause of blindness, kidney failure, heart disease, and nerve damage. It is also a major risk factor for heart disease and stroke. There are two main types of diabetes: type 1 and type 2.

Hyperthyroidism Hyperthyroidism is a condition in which the thyroid gland produces too much of the hormone thyroxine. This hormone speeds up the body's metabolism, causing weight loss, increased heart rate, and other symptoms. It is often caused by an autoimmune disease called Graves' disease.

Hypothyroidism Hypothyroidism is a condition in which the thyroid gland produces too little of the hormone thyroxine. This slows down the body's metabolism, causing weight gain, fatigue, and other symptoms. It is often caused by an autoimmune disease called Hashimoto's thyroiditis.

Addison's Disease Addison's disease is a rare condition in which the adrenal glands produce too little of the hormones cortisol and aldosterone. This can lead to low blood pressure, fatigue, and other symptoms. It is often caused by an autoimmune disease.

Cushing's syndrome Cushing's syndrome is a condition in which the body produces too much of the hormone cortisol. This can lead to weight gain, high blood pressure, and other symptoms. It is often caused by a tumor on the adrenal gland or by the long-term use of corticosteroid drugs.

Parkinson's Disease Parkinson's disease is a chronic movement disorder that affects the brain. It is characterized by tremors, rigidity, and a loss of muscle control. The exact cause of the disease is unknown, but it is thought to be related to a loss of dopamine-producing cells in the brain.
