linguistic framework and is laid out like a conventional typological linguistic grammar. The book is bilingual apart from a few bits from the mother tongue speakers at intervals in Shetland as is only right. English. This is the first bilingual grammar of Shetland, the language which pre-dates English in Shetland, the northernmost part of the UK. The language is of a mixed ancestry with Norse and Scots as its main input languages but with a linguistic history shaped by intense contact with the Low Country Germanic languages due to the intense Hanseatic and fishing trades. Shetland has seen severe stigmatisation over the last few centuries and has never been formally recognised. It is now in an endangered state with dwindling intergenerational transmission. However, the structure of the language has remained remarkably resilient and still shows its unique Mixed Language ancestry not only in its vocabulary but also in its grammar. This grammar describes the language from a linguistic typological perspective and places it in a global typological context. While it is a linguistically oriented book, it is written to be accessible for the general public. The data consists of 37.5 hours of archival recordings which represents a corpus of about 400,000 words as well as more than nine years of interviews, participant observation and immersion. The book starts with seven contributions by Shetland mother tongue speakers. It is then divided into two parts. Part I sets the scene and gives the historical linguistic background to the formation of Shetland, discusses its status and place in society today, shows the data for classifying it as a Mixed Language in its own right and presents the orthography used for the data in the Shetland Project. Part II gives a grammatical description of contemporary Shetland using a general typological linguistic framework and structured as a conventional typological linguistic grammar. The entire book is bilingual with the exception of the seven introductory contributions by Shetland mother tongue speakers which are in Shetland only.
