Biomass as Feedstock for a Bioenergy and Bioproducts Industry ,2005 The U S Department of Energy DOE and the U S Department of Agriculture USDA are both strongly committed to expanding the role of biomass as an energy source In particular they support biomass fuels and products as a way to reduce the need for oil and gas imports to support the growth of agriculture forestry and rural economies and to foster major new domestic industries biorefineries making a variety of fuels chemicals and other products As part of this effort the Biomass R AND D Technical Advisory Committee a panel established by the Congress to guide the future direction of federally funded biomass R AND D envisioned a 30 percent replacement of the current U S petroleum consumption with biofuels by 2030 Biomass all plant and plant derived materials including animal manure not just starch sugar oil crops already used for food and energy has great potential to provide renewable energy for America s future Biomass recently surpassed hydropower as the largest domestic source of renewable energy and currently provides over 3 percent of the total energy consumption in the United States In addition to the many benefits common to renewable energy biomass is particularly attractive because it is the only current renewable source of liquid transportation fuel This of course makes it invaluable in reducing oil imports one of our most pressing energy needs A key question however is how large a role could biomass play in responding to the nation s energy demands Assuming that economic and financial policies and advances in conversion technologies make biomass fuels and products more economically viable could the biorefinery industry be large enough to have a significant impact on energy supply and oil imports Any and all contributions are certainly needed but would the biomass potential be sufficiently large to justify the necessary capital replacements in the fuels and automobile sectors
