Helpful Unit Vocabulary

1. Anecdote: A brief story about something interesting or funny in real life that may give an example of the author's claim or serve as evidence for a claim.

Example: "There's a reason World of Warcraft game is played 22 hours a week... it's because we know we are happier working hard than just relaxing or hanging out."

2. Analogy/metaphor: A comparison between two things that allows the reader to understand the author's evidence or claim in a clear way.

Example: "Gamers are virtuous at wearing a tight social fabric."

3. Fact/statistic: A piece of information about something, presented as true and accurate, that supports the author's claim. A statistic specifically counts something by number.

Example: "10,000 hours of game play by the age of 21..."

4. Expert Testimony: A statement that supports the author's claim, made by a person with special skill or knowledge.

Example: "There is a lot of negative press about gaming, and that's not well-supported. When there is a negative effect, research shows it's on the minority of people," Dr. Johnson said.

Directions: Label each example with the correct vocabulary word.

"The search indicates that we like someone better after we've played a game with them."

"So what do the 14 hour average hours of gamers add up to?"
