Federal Student Aid George A. Scott,2010-06 There is concern about the length and complexity of the Free Application for Fed Student Aid FAFSA and the statutory need analysis formula used to determine aid eligibility A study group examined options and implications in simplifying the financial aid process It focused on 1 identifying ways to shorten the FAFSA and make it less burdensome to complete 2 identifying changes to the statutory need analysis formula that would reduce the amount of financial info required by the FAFSA without causing redist of fed and state student aid and 3 determining how any changes to the FAFSA and the statutory need analysis formula could be implemented This summary captures the ideas and themes that emerged at the panel and during interviews

Federal Student Aid Handbook, 2006-2007. Application and Verification Guide Department of Education, Washington, DC., 2006 This publication is intended for financial aid administrators and counselors who help students begin the student aid process filing the Free Application for Federal Student Aid FAFSA verifying information and making corrections and other changes to the information reported on the FAFSA This guide contains the following chapters 1 The Application Process FAFSA to ISIR which explains that the laws governing the FSA programs require that a person apply for aid with a form provided by the Department of Education and that no fee be charged for processing it Students can fill out a paper FAFSA or they can apply electronically 2 Filling Out the FAFSA which provides guidance that supplements the application instructions and discusses some of the more difficult questions that may arise 3 Expected Family Contribution EFC which describes the EFC formula in detail 4 Verification which provides a list and discussion of required verification items and 5 Corrections Updates and Adjustments which recognizes that there are situations where the original application information may need to be changed such as when errors need to be corrected when dependency status or household size changes or when an aid administrator makes an adjustment based on professional judgment A Verification Worksheet is included in this document An Exploration of Financial Aid Application Patterns and College Access Ellie Marie Bruecker, 2021 I explore FAFSA completion within the high school context through a three essay dissertation Each study connects high school level FAFSA completion data from the Federal Student Aid Office to other federal or state datasets that allow for assessment of the impact of a variety of high school characteristics In paper 1 I examine high school level FAFSA completion nationwide investigating the relationships between a variety of school characteristics and FAFSA completion rates I also identify specific equity gaps in FAFSA completion both nationwide and at the state level These findings set a baseline for understanding trends in 12th grade FAFSA completion which do not necessarily mirror the patterns found in prior research using college student unit survey data In paper 2 I evaluate the compliance costs of the FAFSA as an administrative burden and test the efficacy of College Goal Wisconsin s FAFSA assistance events using three event study models I find small but positive associations between weekly FAFSA completion rates and having an event within the school district but this association does not extend to larger geographic areas In paper 3 I investigate the effectiveness of Louisiana s mandatory FAFSA policy on increasing college enrollment using a difference in differences research design In this analysis I consider rational choice theories and sociological cultural and ecological theories of college going which offer possible explanations as to why we might expect a mandatory FAFSA policy to improve college enrollment rates I find positive impacts on college enrollment among schools who had the lowest pre policy FAFSA completion rates when compared to schools with the highest pre policy completion rates However these positive results appear to be driven by schools with lower proportions of low income students and students of color I find that racial and socioeconomic inequities in college enrollment were maintained or increased into the post policy period Collectively these papers add to the literature on financial aid and the FAFSA by highlighting the important role of school contexts and identifying local state and federal actions that can bolster FAFSA completion and financial aid access

S. Department U.S. Department of Education,2014-05-24 Federal Student Aid uses the data on your FAFSA to calculate an Expected Family Contribution EFC The EFC is an indicator of your family s financial strength to pay for education after high school Your school will subtract your EFC from your total cost of attendance The result is your financial need The EFC is not the amount of money that your family must provide Rather you should think of the EFC as an index that the college will use to determine how much financial aid grants loans or work study you would receive if you were to attend that school Your application results are transmitted to the school s listed on your FAFSA and the school s uses the EFC amount to determine the amount of financial aid that you are eligible to receive Many states and schools also use the FAFSA data to award aid from their programs Some states and schools also may require you to complete additional applications Completing and submitting a FAFSA is free whether you file electronically or on paper To Apply Or Not to Apply Michael Kofoed,2015 In the United States college students must complete the Free

Application for Student Federal Aid FAFSA to access all forms of federal aid However many eligible students do not apply and consequently forgo significant amounts of financial aid Using data from the 1999 2000 2003 2004 and 2007 2008 National Postsecondary Student Aid Survey I examine characteristics that influence whether an eligible student fails to complete FAFSA and how much financial aid non applicants could have received From a nationally representative sample I find that 13.5 percent of eligible students who attend college do not complete FAFSA These students tend to be lower to middle income white and male Using propensity score matching I find that each year on average applicants forgo $9.741 billion in total aid which aggregates to $24 billion Forgone aid includes Pell Grants subsidized student loans work study and state aid programs

The Role of Simplification and Information in College Decisions, 2009 Growing concerns about low awareness and take up rates for government support programs like college financial aid have spurred calls to simplify the application process and enhance visibility This project examines the effects of two experimental treatments designed to test of the importance of simplification and information using a random assignment research design H R Block tax professionals helped low to moderate income families complete the FAFSA the federal application for financial aid Families were then given an estimate of their eligibility for government aid as well as information about local postsecondary options A second randomly chosen group of individuals received only personalized aid eligibility information but did not receive help completing the FAFSA Comparing the outcomes of participants in the treatment groups to a control group using multiple sources of administrative data the analysis suggests that individuals who received assistance with the FAFSA and information about aid were substantially more likely to submit the aid application enroll in college the following fall and receive more financial aid These results suggest that simplification and providing information could be effective ways to improve college access However only providing aid eligibility information without also giving assistance with the form had no significant effect on FAFSA submission rates
