Women's Empowerment for a Sustainable Future Claude-Hélène Mayer, Elisabeth Vanderheiden, Orna Braun-Lewensohn, Gila Chen, Kiyoko Sueda, Brightness Mangolothi, Saba Safdar, Soyeon Kim, 2023-07-08 This edited volume focuses on women's empowerment for a sustainable future. It takes cultural and transcultural and positive psychology perspectives into consideration and explores the topic of women's empowerment from diverse stances across social strata, cultural divides as well as economic and political divisions. It addresses the critique of the overly Western focus of positive psychology on this topic by adopting a transnational and transcultural lens and by taking non-WEIRD Western Educated Industrialized Rich Democratic samples into in-depth consideration. The chapters therefore focus on women from diverse socio-cultural, political, socio-economic backgrounds and discuss their ways of empowering others and being empowered. They also discuss related positive psychology constructs such as coping, resilience, transformation, growth, leadership, creativity, identity, development, sustainable action as well as positive socio-economic, political, and eco-sustainable thought and action. The volume as a whole looks at women's leadership as a factor of empowerment. A further fundamental assumption is that women's empowerment is needed to create a sustainable future at micro, meso, and macro levels which presumes safety, peace, ecological considerations, and compassionate leadership.

The Economics of Protected Marine Species: Concepts in Research and Management Kristy Wallmo, Kathryn Bisack, Daniel K. Lew, Dale E. Squires, 2016-10-21 Protected marine species have populations that are depleted, decreasing, or are at risk of extinction or local extirpation. As of 2015, The International Union for the Conservation of Nature, a global environmental organization, lists approximately 737 marine species worldwide that are considered at risk of extinction. Many are provided legal protection through national laws requiring research and management measures aimed at recovering and maintaining the species at a sustainable population level. Integral to the policy decision process involving the management and recovery of marine species is the consideration of trade-offs between the economic and ecological costs and benefits of protection. This suggests that economics, at its core, the study of trade-offs, has a significant role. In the U.S., a somewhat traditional use of economics in protected species research and management has involved cost minimization or cost effectiveness analyses to help select or prioritize conservation actions. Economic research has also provided estimates of public non-market benefits of recovering species which can be used in larger management frameworks such as ecosystem based management and coastal and marine spatial planning Inherent in much of this research however are complex biological and ecological relationships in which varying degrees of scientific uncertainty are present Addressing this type of uncertainty can affect the economic outcomes related to protected species For example recent work suggests that increasing scientific precision in biological sampling and models can greatly affect the magnitude of economic benefits to commercial fisheries while other research suggests that public non market benefits of species recovery are sensitive to uncertainty about baseline population estimates Previous research has illustrated the importance of understanding the biological ecological and economic aspects of protected species management and recovery In this research topic we synthesize current protected marine species economic research and expand the discussion on present and future challenges related to protected species economics The series of manuscripts brings together an array of prominent researchers and advances our understanding of the ecological and economic aspects of managing and recovering protected marine species

Library,1974 A History of the Iziko South African National Gallery Anna Tietze,2017-06-14 In South Africa with its highly contested and changing understandings of national identity its National Gallery is no less a contested space A History of the Iziko South African National Gallery considers questions of artistic and cultural identity from the late 19th century to the present day It explores how the gallery has understood its function and its public as a national gallery from 1930 and before that the chief gallery of the Cape Colony This question is investigated through a study of the gallery s administration collection and exhibition practices over the last 150 years What is understood by and expected of a national gallery varies considerably worldwide Should it regard itself as part of a broad international cultural discourse or should it be representative of a specifically national or even regional identity The gallery is a microcosm of the greater debate how the South African nation relates to the larger world and how if at all it understands the concept of a shared culture In the last 20 years Museum Studies have become a major part of the field of Cultural Studies There is a vast literature on what might be called the history museum but far less on the art museum or gallery To date there has been no large scale historical inquiry into the Iziko SANG the country s national gallery The absence of such a history marks a serious gap in the literature which this study aims to fill
