Ralegan Siddhi is a small village in the district of Ahmadnagar, Maharashtra. It has become an example for watershed development throughout the country.

In 1975, this village was caught in a web of poverty and illicit liquor trade. The transformation took place when a retired army personnel settled down in the village and took up the task of watershed development.

He convinced villagers about the importance of family planning and voluntary labour; preventing open grazing, felling trees, and liquor prohibition.

Voluntary labour was necessary to ensure minimum dependence on the government for financial aids. "It socialised the costs of the projects," explained the activist. Even those who were working outside the village contributed to the development by committing a month's salary every year.

Work began with the percolation tank constructed in the village. In 1975, the tank could not hold water. The embankment wall leaked. People voluntarily repaired the embankment. The seven wells below it swelled with water in Nearly half a millennium earlier the practice of earth writing geographia emerged from the cloisters of the great library of Alexandria as a discipline blending the twin pursuits of Strabo's poetic impression of places and Herodotus' chronicles of events and cultures. Eratosthenes, a librarian at Alexandria and the mathematician Ptolemy, employed geometry as another language with which to pursue earth writing. From this ancient East Mediterranean fount, the streams of literary perception, historical record, and geographical analysis, phenomenological and Euclidean, found confluence. The aim of this collection is to recover such means and seek the fount of such rich waters by exploring relations between historical geography, geographic information science, GIS, geoscience, and textual analysis. The book discusses and illustrates current case studies, trends, and discourses in European, American, and Asian spheres where historical geography is practiced in concert with human and physical applications of GIS and the broader geosciences, and the analysis of text broadly conceived as archival, literary, historical, cultural, climatic, scientific, digital, cinematic, and media. Time as a multi-scaled concept, again broadly conceived, is the pivot around which the interdisciplinary contributions to this volume revolve. In The Landscape of Time (2002), the historian John Lewis Gaddis posits: "What if we were to think of history as a kind of mapping?" He links the ancient practice of mapmaking with the three-part conception of time: past, present, and future. Gaddis presents the practices of cartography and historical narrative as attempts to manage infinitely complex subjects by imposing abstract grids to frame the phenomena being examined: longitude and latitude to frame landscapes; and occidental and oriental temporal scales to frame timescapes. Gaddis contends that if the past is a landscape and history is the way we represent it, then it follows that pattern recognition constitutes a primary form of human perception, one that can be parsed empirically, statistically, and phenomenologically. In turn, this volume reasons that literary, historical, cartographical, scientific, mathematical, and counterfactual narratives create their own spatio-temporal frames of reference. Confluences between the poetic and the positivistic, the empirical and the impressionistic, the epic and the episodic, and the chronologic and the chorologic can be identified and studied by integrating practices in historical geography, GIScience, geoscience, and textual analysis. As a result, new perceptions and insights facilitating further avenues of scholarship into uncharted waters emerge. The various ways in which geographical, historical, and textual perspectives are hermeneutically woven together in this volume illuminates the different methods with which to explore terrae incognitae of knowledge beyond the shores of their own separate disciplinary islands.
