Bobick, 1986 The Bureau of Mines entered into a cooperative agreement with an eastern Kentucky coal mining company to comprehensively redesign the flow of equipment and supplies throughout its underground mines Items were tracked from delivery to the warehouse and from surface storage areas to their final usage locations underground Three underground mines were visited and a great variety of tasks were videotaped for subsequent laboratory analysis Of particular interest were tasks that required manual handling of the supplies or equipment components Activities such as handling daily supplies concrete blocks rock dust and cross beams and handling or lifting the continuous miner power cable were determined to be the most hazardous Recommendations to the company included redesigned surface storage areas to facilitate the use of forklift vehicles to load the underground supply cars. Designs were also developed for different mechanical assist devices to help in unloading the supply cars underground and to handle equipment maintenance tasks underground. Additionally, the videotapes of the underground manual handling tasks became the basis for simulating those activities in controlled laboratory conditions.
