

A classical painting of a woman with blonde, curly hair, wearing an ornate, dark dress with gold accents. She is looking upwards and to the right with a serene expression. Her hands are raised, with fingers slightly spread, as if she is playing an instrument or gesturing. The background is dark and indistinct.

provisionality of the sonatas notated texts suggesting that the texts are not so much identifiers as possibilities and that their identity resides in the usage Close attention is paid to reception matters analytical approaches organology the role of autograph manuscripts early editions and editors and aspects of historical performance practice all of which go beyond the texts in opening windows onto Mozart's sonatas Treating the sonatas collectively as a repertoire rather than as individual works the book surveys broad thematic issues such as the role of historical writing about music in defining a generic space for Mozart's sonatas their construction within pedagogical traditions the significance of sound as opposed to sight in these works and in particular their sound on fortepianos of the later eighteenth century and the creative role of the performer in their representation beyond the frame of the text Drawing together and synthesizing this wealth of material Irving provides an invaluable reference source for those already familiar with this repertoire Study Guide Joseph Machlis, 1963
