The Arithmetic Teacher, 1991 Resources in Education, 2001 Singapore Math and Science Education Innovation Oon Seng Tan, Ee Ling Low, Eng Guan Tay, Yaw Kai Yan, 2021-08-04 This edited volume explores key areas of interests in Singapore math and science education including issues on teacher education pedagogy curriculum assessment teaching practices applied learning ecology of learning talent grooming culture of science and math vocational education and STEM It presents to policymakers and educators a clear picture of the education scene in Singapore and insights into the role of math and science education in helping the country excel beyond international studies such as PISA the pedagogical and curricula advancements in math and science learning and the research and practices that give Singaporean students the competitive edge in facing the uncertain and challenging landscape of the future A Good School for Every Child Cyril Taylor, 2009-02-10 This book offers an insider's look at some of the key challenges in education and is an invaluable guide for parents and teachers interested in how our schools work today Frontiers in the Acquisition of Literacy Claire M. Fletcher-Flinn, 2015-09-28 Learning to read and to spell are two of the most important cultural skills that must be acquired by children and for that matter anyone learning a second language We are not born with an innate ability to read A reading system of mental representations that enables us to read must be formed in the brain Learning to read in alphabetic orthographies is the acquisition of such a system which links mental representations of visual symbols letters in print words with pre-existing phonological sound and semantic comprehension cognitive systems for language Although spelling draws on the same representational knowledge base and is usually correlated with reading the acquisition processes involved are not quite the same Spelling requires the sequential production of letters in words and at beginning levels there may not be a full degree of integration of phonology with its representation by the orthography Reading on the other hand requires only the recognition of a word for pronunciation Hence spelling is more difficult than reading and learning to spell may necessitate more complete representations or more conscious access to them The learning processes that children use to acquire such cognitive systems in the brain and whether these same processes are universal across different languages and orthographies are central theoretical questions Most children learn to read and spell their language at the same time thus the co-ordination of these two facets of literacy acquisition needs explication as well as the effect of different teaching approaches on acquisition Lack of progress in either reading and or spelling is also a major issue of concern for parents and teachers necessitating a cross-disciplinary approach to the problem encompassing major efforts from researchers in neuroscience cognitive science experimental psychology and education The purpose of this Research Topic is to summarize and review what has been accomplished so far and to further explore these general issues Contributions from different perspectives are welcomed and could include theoretical computational and empirical works that focus on the acquisition of literacy including cross-orthographic research Passing the Literacy Skills Test Jim Johnson, Bruce Bond, 2015-02-16
