

Narrative Research

Narrative research is a term that subsumes a group of approaches that in turn rely on the written or spoken words or visual representation of individuals. These approaches typically focus on the lives of individuals as told through their own stories. The emphasis in such approaches is on the story, typically both what and how is narrated. Narrative research can be considered both a research method in itself but also the phenomenon under study.

Narrative methods can be considered "real world measures" that are appropriate when "real life problems" are investigated. In a basic linear approach, they encompass the study of the experiences of a single individual embracing stories of the life and exploring the learned significance of those individual experiences. However, in most cases one will be creating an aggregate of narratives each bearing on the others.

Narrative research is set out by the validation of the audience. It is a useful part of the social science investigation, but may not always stand alone for evidence and support for the conclusions of a report. Whether or not it is a part of a great presentation or whether it is a stand alone piece of research, it has to be accepted on its own merits as individual experience and the interpretation of thereof. The question arises as to the accuracy of the story looked at objectively even though it must be viewed in its socio-cultural context. The narrative gives one's individual view to be accessed on its merits. Such validation is possible by corroboration from another narrative.

While some types of qualitative analysis have a standard set of procedures, narrative research is questionable in this regard. One of the weaknesses of studying narratives is that the text is by its own nature linguistically subjective, i.e. difficult to quantitatively access in an objective manner since it is subjective i.e. personally meaningful.

A number of data collection methods can be used, as the researcher and the research subjects work together in this collaborative dialogic relationship. Data can be in the form of field notes; journal records; interview transcripts; one's own and other's observations; storytelling; letter writing; autobiographical writing; documents such as school and class plans, newsletters, and other texts, such as rules and principles; and pictures. To this list, one should add audio and video recordings, as these are also useful data in narrative research.

Dedicated research software like ATLAS.ti help the researcher to catalog, penetrate and analyze the data generated in a given research project. All forms

Doing Qualitative Research in Social Work Ian Shaw, Sally Holland, 2014-04-15 Bringing key developments and debates together in a single volume this book provides an authoritative guide for students and practitioners embarking on qualitative research in social work and related fields. Frequently illustrated with contemporary and classic case examples from the authors own empirical research and from international published work and with self directed learning tasks the book provides insight into the difficulties and complexities of carrying out research as well as sharing success stories from the field. Shaw and Holland have long experience of writing for practitioners and students and in making complex concepts accessible and readable making this an ideal text for those engaging in qualitative social work research at any level. Ian Shaw is a Professor of Social Work at the University of York and at the University of Aalborg. Sally Holland is a Reader in Social Work at the School of Social Sciences in Cardiff University.

Research Methods in Applied Settings Jeffrey A. Gliner, George A. Morgan, Nancy L. Leech, 2011-03-17 Through its integrated approach to quantitative research methods this text teaches readers how to plan, conduct and write a research project and select and interpret data so they can become better consumers of research. This is not a statistics book; there are very few formulas. Rather, this book helps students master which statistic to use when and how to interpret the results. Organized around the steps one takes in conducting a research project, this book is ideal for applied programs and for those who want to analyze and evaluate research articles. Having taught in a variety of departments, the authors have a good grasp of the research problems faced by master's and doctoral students in diverse areas of the behavioral and social sciences. Text adopters applaud the book's clarity. Students are often confused by other texts' use of inconsistent terminology. To avoid this confusion, the authors present a semantically consistent picture that emphasizes five research approaches: randomized experimental, quasi experimental, comparative, associational and descriptive. The authors then show how these approaches lead to three kinds of research designs which in turn lead to three groups of statistics with the same names. This consistent framework increases comprehension and the ability to apply the material. Numerous applied problems, annotated examples and diagrams and tables further promote comprehension. Although the book emphasizes quantitative research, the value of qualitative research is introduced. This extensively revised edition features more than 50% new material including:

- A new chapter on the evidence based approach that emphasizes the importance of reporting confidence intervals and effect sizes and the increased use of meta analysis.
- An increased emphasis on evaluating research including an 8 step plan for evaluating research validity (Chs 23-24) and its application to the 5 sample studies used throughout the book (Ch 25).
- Lots of practical advice on planning a research project (Ch 2), data collection and coding (Ch 15), writing the research report (Ch 27), questions to use in evaluating a research article (Appendix E) and creating APA tables and figures (Appendix F).
- A new chapter on non experimental approaches (designs).

Ch 7 including qualitative research Web resources for students including critical thinking problems with answers and a sample outline of a research proposal An earlier and expanded introduction to measurement reliability and validity to further emphasize their differences and importance An extensively revised chapter on measurement validity consistent with the latest APA AERA NCME standards Fewer chapters on inferential statistics with an increased focus on how their selection is related to the design of the study and how to interpret the results using significance testing and effect sizes and confidence intervals Instructor s Resources with Power Points test questions answers to the application questions and more Intended for graduate research or quantitative experimental methods design courses in psychology education human development and family studies and other behavioral social business and health sciences independent sections and chapters can be read in many orders allowing for flexibility in assigning topics Due to its practical approach this book also appeals to researchers and clinicians Prior exposure to statistics and research methods is recommended Qualitative Research in the Study of
