Primary and Secondary Sources

Historians use primary and secondary sources to learn more about events in history. A primary source is a record of events as they are first described and are witnessed by the people who were involved in the event. Some examples of primary sources are diary entries, photographs, interviews, and original artwork.

Secondary sources are records of events that are written after the event takes place. They are created by someone who was not at the event. Some examples of secondary sources are textbooks, websites, books, and articles. Both primary and secondary sources can help us learn about the past. It is important to remember that these historical documents are from one perspective. When studying the past, it is helpful to get more than one perspective.

Narration, Identity, and Historical Consciousness Jürgen Straub, 2006-01-01 A generally acknowledged characteristic of modern life namely the temporalization of experience inextricable from our intensified experience of contingency and difference has until now remained largely outside psychology's purview Wherever questions about the development structure and function of the concept of time have been posed for example by Piaget and other founders of genetic structuralism they have been concerned predominantly with concepts of physical chronometrical time and related concepts e.g. velocity All the contributions to the present volume attempt to close this gap A larger number are especially interested in the narration of stories Overviews of the relevant literature as well as empirical case studies appear alongside theoretical and methodological reflections Most contributions refer to specifically historical phenomena and meaning constructions Some touch on the subjects of biographical memory and biographical constructions of reality Of all the various affinities between the contributions collected here the most important is their consistent attention to issues of the constitution and representation of temporal experience

Doing History Linda S. Levstik, Keith C. Barton, 2022-09-06 Now in its sixth edition Doing History offers a unique perspective on teaching and learning history in the elementary and middle grades Through case studies of teachers and students in diverse classrooms and from diverse backgrounds it shows children engaging in authentic historical investigations often in the context of an integrated social studies curriculum The book is grounded in the view that children can engage in valid forms of historical inquiry asking questions collecting and analyzing evidence examining the varied perspectives and experiences of people in the past and creating evidence based historical accounts and interpretations Grounded in contemporary sociocultural theory and research the text features vignettes in each chapter showing communities of teachers and students doing history in environments rich in literature art writing and discussion The authors explain how these classrooms reflect contemporary principles of teaching and learning and thus the descriptions not only provide specific examples of successful activities but also place them in a context that allows teachers to adapt and apply them in a wide range of settings Doing History emphasizes diversity in two ways Readers encounter students from a variety of backgrounds and see how their diverse experiences can form the foundation for learning and they also see examples of how teachers can engage students with diverse experiences and perspectives in the past including those that led to conflict and oppression The book also discusses principles for working with English learners and newcomers and it provides guidance in using multiple forms of assessment to evaluate the specifically historical aspects of children s learning Updates to this edition include updated historical and instructional examples to ensure currency new suggestions for children s literature to support good teaching expanded attention to teaching about oppressed groups in history and greater attention to when historical perspective taking is and is not appropriate Representing the Past Charlotte M.
