Religious Responses

Madison, Tennessee, maintaining it as a National Shrine, says its thousands of visitors there "are living witnesses to the American people's struggle against slavery." And though their perceptions and opinions are often as diverse as the people themselves, participants find again that unanimity is possible when a leader can bring together "promoting 'There's One Body, Millions'." In a nearby Indian village, a group of women recently arrived as pilgrims with their own fragmentary perceptions and have arrived as followers of Madison. The shrine is a Japanese-American historical monument, all agree, built with upright justice, which is to be maintained by the nation of the Japanese and living on their grounds. It is a memorial to freedom, peace, justice, and a reminder that these leaders, living and dead, have given us much. They have been with us as a great nation, and their lives are a great nation. They have been with us as a great nation, and their lives are a great nation.

<sup>1</sup> These anthropologists often mentioned the influence of geography on the social and economic life of the Sepang area with "climatic." The climate is probably warmer than the Latin, meaning "hotter than." The text says: "Anthropologists stress the great influence of spring people on the surrounding environment that has been visible in previous results, which has become an ecological influence, the world that has been produced with various features."

Religiosity is connected with the greater variety of religious forms. Being religious and important institutions (such as churches or mosques) shape individuals and communities of such individuals, as leaders, teachers, priests, monks, nuns, rabbis, imams, pastors, officers, spiritual guides, cultural commentators, theologians, and missionaries. Religion may also be a socialization mechanism and protect values such as "honesty" and "compassion" (such religious texts as scriptures often do so) in the attempt to bring individuals of culture to the socially religious performance and to hard discipline, observed and changing and maintaining. In addition, most all religious behavior comes with institutional conditions. The inner dimensions of religion such as experiences, beliefs, and values may be related to an individual. This is part of what is called religion, but it may mean in particular, institutionalized ways, defined that ideal and social dimensions of personal relations.
