Discovering Mathematics with Magma Wieb Bosma, John Cannon, 2007-07-10 The appearance of this volume celebrates the first decade of Magma a new computer algebra system launched at the First Magma Conference on Computational Algebra held at Queen Mary and Westfield College London August 1993 This book introduces the reader to the role Magma plays in advanced mathematical research Each paper examines how the computer can be used to gain insight into either a single problem or a small group of closely related problems The intention is to present sufficient detail so that a reader can gain insight into the mathematical questions that are the origin of the problems and develop an understanding as to how such computations are specified in Magma It is hoped that the reader will come to a realisation of the important role that computational algebra can play in mathematical research Readers not primarily interested in using Magma will easily acquire the skills needed to undertake basic programming in Magma while experienced Magma users can learn both mathematics and advanced computational methods in areas related to their own The core of the volume comprises 14 papers The authors were invited to submit articles on designated topics and these articles were then reviewed by referees Although by no means exhaustive the topics range over a considerable part of Magma's coverage of algorithmic algebra from number theory and algebraic geometry via representation theory and computational group theory to some branches of discrete mathematics and graph theory The papers are preceded by an outline of the Magma project a brief summary of the papers and some instructions on reading the Magma code A basic introduction to the Magma language is given in an appendix

The editors express their gratitude to the contributors to this volume both for the work put into producing the papers and for their patience group theory discrete dynamics topology and complexity A selection of open problems discussed during the thematic term is also included HRW algebra one interactions Holt, Rinehart, and Winston, inc,199? Combinatorial Optimization Bernhard Korte,Jens Vygen,2013-11-11 It was more than a surprise to us that the first edition of this book already went out of print about a year after its first appearance We were flattered by the many positive and even enthusiastic comments and letters from colleagues and the general readership Several of our colleagues helped us in finding typographical and other errors In particular we thank Ulrich Brenner Andras Frank Bernd Gartner and Rolf Mohring Of course all errors detected so far have been corrected in this second edition and references have been updated Moreover the first preface had a flaw We listed all individuals who helped us in preparing this book But we forgot to mention the institutional support for which we make amends here It is evident that a book project which took seven years benefited from many different grants We would like to mention explicitly the bilateral Hungarian German Research Project sponsored by the Hungarian Academy of Sciences and the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft two Sonderforschungsbereiche special research units of the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft the Ministere Franc ais de la Recherche et de la Technologie and the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation for support via the Prix Alexandre de Humboldt and the Commission of the European Communities for participation in two projects DONET Our most sincere thanks go to the Union of the German Academies of Sciences and Humanities and to the Northrhine Westphalian Academy of Sciences

Time Series Modelling with Unobserved Components Matteo M. Pelagatti,2015-07-28 Despite the unobserved components model UCM having many advantages over more popular forecasting techniques based on regression analysis exponential smoothing and ARIMA the UCM is not well known among practitioners outside the academic community Time Series Modelling with Unobserved Components rectifies this deficiency by giving a practical o
