Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 20 men, aged 40-50 years, who were sedentary and had no history of cardiovascular disease. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic and resistance training. The control group did not exercise. Physical fitness was measured by maximum heart rate, maximum oxygen consumption, and maximum power. Health was measured by blood pressure, cholesterol, and body weight. The exercise group showed significant improvements in all measures of physical fitness and health compared to the control group.
