In addition to the three main windows, SketchUp also includes several other windows, such as the Component window that's open in Figure 1-1. You can open and close these as needed by using the Window menu. With the tools in these windows, you'll apply color and shading to your models, select prefabricated components, add shadows and lighting effects, and export your project.

Don't Be Afraid to Play

When you get started, don't be afraid to play. SketchUp is a 3D modeling software, and it's designed to be fun. You can create a model of anything you can imagine, and you can share it with others. Don't be afraid to experiment and make mistakes. That's how you learn.

It's important to remember that SketchUp is a tool, not a magic wand. It can't create a perfect model for you, but it can help you create a model that's close to what you want. So, don't be afraid to play. That's the best way to learn.

SketchUp's menu bar is located at the top of the window, and it includes the File, Edit, Window, and Help menus. The File menu is the most important, and it includes options for opening, saving, and exporting your models. The Edit menu includes options for selecting, moving, and deleting objects. The Window menu includes options for opening and closing the various windows. The Help menu includes options for accessing the SketchUp documentation.
