Miller,1961      A Romp Thru Science Bernie Keating,2012-07-16 Why Science We are fascinated by discovery who discovered what and how This ranges from a look outward at the night sky with scientists like Kepler astronauts like Neil Armstrong to physicist like Einstein chemists like Marie Curie and Linus Pauling an inward look at psychologists such as Skinner and Maslow and philosophers like Plato Join Keating as he explores the pursuit of scientific discovery from his background as a physicists and a long career in the margins of the academic world      Radiation and Reason Wade Allison, 2009 This is a positive and accessible account of the effect of radiation on life that brings good news for the future of mankind For more than half a century the view that radiation represents an extreme hazard has been accepted This book challenges that view by facing the question How dangerous is ionising radiation Briefly the answer is that radiation is about a thousand times less hazardous than suggested by current safety standards For many this will come as a surprise and then quickly raise a second question Why are people so worried about radiation This is the out of date result of Cold War politics combined with a concern about radiation that was appropriate in an earlier age when the scientific understanding was limited In the book these answers are explained in accessible language and related directly to modern scientific evidence and understanding for instance the high levels of radiation used to the benefit of health in every major hospital Four facts illustrate the need for a new understanding

- 1 The radiation levels in the nuclear waste storage hall at Sellafield UK are so low 1 micro sievert per hour that anyone would have to stay there for a million hours to receive the same dose that any patient on a course of radiotherapy treatment receives to their healthy tissue in a single day 1 sievert or gray
- 2 The radiation dose experienced by the survivors of the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombs caused 0.6% to die of radiation induced cancer between 1950 and 2000 that is about 1/20 of the chance of dying of cancer anyway and less than the chance of being killed on US highways in that period
- 3 The wildlife at Chernobyl today is reported to be thriving despite being radioactive
- 4 The mortality of UK radiation workers before age 85 from all cancers is 15-20% lower than comparable groups

The case for a complete change in attitude towards radiation safety is unrelated to the effects of climate change But the realisation that radiation and nuclear energy are much safer than is usually supposed is of extreme importance to the current discussion of alternatives to fossil fuels and their relative costs
