

Guide

A boy with brown hair and a surprised expression is floating in the ocean. He is wearing a red and orange striped life preserver. The water is a mix of blue and green, with white foam from waves. The sky is a bright orange, suggesting a sunset or sunrise. The word "Guide" is written in a large, blue, stylized font at the top of the page.

his introduction Marcus Bull identifies issues which the collection helps to elucidate and assesses the value of the text as source material particularly in view of the lack of other chronicles from southern France for the period. He makes comparisons with other texts such as the miracle collection compiled at the shrine of Thomas Becket at Canterbury and argues that the monks of Rocamadour asserted their importance through the miracles in the face of competition from neighbouring monastic communities. MARCUS BULL is Andrew W Mellon Distinguished Professor of Medieval and Early Modern Studies at the University of North Carolina Chapel Hill. Christian Register and Boston Observer..., 1902

Etymological and Pronouncing Dictionary of the English Language James Stormonth, 1901 Christ the Miracle Worker in Early Christian Art Lee M. Jefferson, 2014-01-01 Artistic representations were of significant value to early Christian communities. In Christ the Miracle Worker in Early Christian Art Lee Jefferson argues that images provided visual representations of vital religious and theological truths crucial to the faithful and projected concepts beyond the limitations of the written and spoken word. Images of Christ performing miracles or healings functioned as advertisements for Christianity and illustrated the nature of Christ. Using these images of Christ, Jefferson examines the power of art, its role in fostering devotion and the deep connection between art and its elucidation of pivotal theological claims.
