Analysis of a Written Work for a First Audience

In the society we live in today, where majority of our lives are work-oriented it causes major stress. Many of us feel so stressed that if they take a break they will fall behind or seen as weak. There is quite a large amount of people that feel if your taking breaks work productivity will be affected and slow down work. Taking Breaks is a great way to clear the mind and relax your body and that way you prevent burn-out. The article is a persuasive article that encourages taking breaks for mental and physical health. Nicole Peluse says when we take breaks it reduces stress and in turn increase productivity and creativity after the break and you're back at work. Nicole Peluse article "Take a break!" emphasizes the effectiveness of stress management resources, she suggests that breaks can significantly reduce the risks of physical or mental health issues and overall enhance life for individuals.

In the article from 2010, the author Nicole Peluse continuously reminds us that are reading how important stress management is. A main point that Peluse tries to make in the article is that technology is changing and is causing a tremendous amount of extra stress on society. In this case, she writes resources and coping mechanisms to better yourself and destress. First, and most importantly Peluse recommends regular physical activity whether it's a short walk or even yoga to reduce stress and helps release endorphins. She believes that we must find things to keep us from becoming extremely burnout and stressed. Similar to students, as a student whether in high school or in college it is extremely stressful trying to figure out what you're supposed to be doing with your life. Also, the distractions that occur such as jobs, family emergencies or even personal issues things come up and eventually can lead to an immense amount of stress on top of already having a full-time school schedule.

Workforce Individuals tend to experience a great amount of stress. After the COVID 19 pandemic, the working classes lives changed forever especially those who are in retail like me. People became mean, impatient and difficult to work for and with, which had caused so many unemployed people in the last few years. The stress of being in an environment where many individuals were overworked and burned out from working extra hours and neglecting their mental health had become a major issue. These people are so consumed in their careers to meet deadlines or quotas that they forgot to maintain a healthy work life balance. Nicole Peluse emphasizes the importance of managing personal stress. She states, "Stress is a truly unavoidable reality of life." The quote from the article emphasizes exactly what the author is trying to explain which is that stress is always going to be a part of our life no matter what, but we must help ourselves by utilizing the resources she provides to manage the stress levels.
