

FEDERALIST 10 ANSWER KEY

1. How does Madison define "faction"?

By a faction, I understand a number of citizens, whether assembled in a majority or a minority of the whole, who are united and actuated by some common impulse of passion, or of interest, adverse to the rights of other citizens, or to the permanent and aggregate interests of the community."

2. What are the two methods of "controlling the mischief of faction?"

Removing its causes and controlling its effects.

3. According to James Madison how do you remove the causes of faction?

1. By removing principal causes, which is essential to the removal of factions. 2. By giving every citizen the same opinions, passions, and interests.

4. Ultimately, why can't faction be removed according to Federalist 10?

1. To remove faction you would have to remove liberty, which delivers the purpose of a Republic. Madison states: "Liberty is to Man what air is to the animal without which it instantly expires. But it could not be less fully to destroy liberty, which is essential to political life, because it removes factions. Then it would be to destroy the constitution itself, which is essential to work all the business of society in the most effective manner."

2. As long as the removing of them is feared, citizens have the ability to remove it, without expenses and by consent, and it is impossible to get every person the same opinion.

5. What are the two ways can factions be controlled?

1. If a faction is less than the majority, by a regular vote. 2. "When a majority is included in a faction, the laws of popular government, on the other hand, enable it to section it to ruling passion or interest both the public good and the rights of other citizens. To secure the public good and private rights against the danger of such a faction, and at the same time to preserve the spirit and the form of popular government, is then the great object to which our inquiries are directed."

6. Madison states that factions cannot be controlled by pure (direct) democracies, why does he make this claim? What point is he trying to convey in the reader about the national government under the Articles of Confederation?

Madison is stating the point clearly to that of the Anti-Federalists that the stronger national government and the Republic founded by the Constitution is better to protect and preserve liberty than the existing Confederacy. The argument of the Anti-Federalists was that the great reputation of the states were better to protect liberty and by granting them the majority of their political power you would preserve liberty. Madison is trying to convince the great reputation of the states is not the important factor for states themselves, government is the good without or without it. If the great reputation of the government under the Articles of Confederation could not be controlled, it would destroy the system to replace. The Republic is government that is run by controlling factions.

7. Why is a Republic the solution?

A Republic allows the public voice to be delivered by giving them through a body of elected representatives who they themselves elect to lead the country. By having not too many or too few representatives you also protect the country against tyranny and also the great benefits and benefits the public trust. By having a sufficient number of representatives, the effect of their election is increased.
