The Neuroscience of Visual Hallucinations Daniel Collerton, 2015-02-23 Each year some two million people in the United Kingdom experience visual hallucinations Infrequent fleeting visual hallucinations often around sleep are a usual feature of life In contrast consistent frequent persistent hallucinations during waking are strongly associated with clinical disorders in particular delirium eye disease psychosis and dementia Research interest in these disorders has driven a rapid expansion in investigatory techniques new evidence and explanatory models In parallel a move to generative models of normal visual function has resolved the theoretical tension between veridical and hallucinatory perceptions From initial fragmented areas of investigation the field has become increasingly coherent over the last decade Controversies and gaps remain but for the first time the shapes of possible unifying models are becoming clear along with the techniques for testing these This book provides a comprehensive survey of the neuroscience of visual hallucinations and the clinical techniques for testing these It brings together the very latest evidence from cognitive neuropsychology neuroimaging neuropathology and neuropharmacology placing this within current models of visual perception Leading researchers from a range of clinical and basic science areas describe visual hallucinations in their historical and scientific context combining introductory information with up to date discoveries They discuss results from the main investigatory techniques applied in a range of clinical disorders The final section outlines future research directions investigating the potential for new understandings of veridical and hallucinatory perceptions and for treatments of problematic hallucinations Fully comprehensive this is an essential reference for clinicians in the fields of the psychology and psychiatry of hallucinations as well as for researchers in departments research institutes and libraries It has strong foundations in neuroscience cognitive science optometry psychiatry psychology clinical medicine and philosophy With its lucid explanation and many illustrations it is a clear resource for educators and advanced undergraduate and graduate students

Perception, Hallucination, and Illusion William Fish, 2009-04-07 The idea of a disjunctive theory of visual experiences first found expression in J M Hinton s pioneering 1973 book Experiences In the first monograph in this exciting area since then William Fish develops a comprehensive disjunctive theory incorporating detailed accounts of the three core kinds of visual experience perception hallucination and illusion and an explanation of how perception and hallucination could be indiscriminable from one another without having anything in common In the veridical case Fish contends that the perception of a particular state of affairs involves the subject s being acquainted with that state of affairs and that it is the subject s standing in this acquaintance relation that makes the experience possess a phenomenal character Fish argues that when we hallucinate we are having an experience that while lacking phenomenal character is mistakenly supposed by the subject to possess it Fish then shows how this approach to visual experience is compatible with empirical research into the workings of the brain and concludes by extending this treatment to cover the many different types of illusion that we can be subject to

Real Hallucinations Matthew Ratcliffe, 2017-09-22 A philosophical account of the structure of experience and how it depends on interpersonal relations developed through a study of auditory verbal hallucinations and thought insertion In Real Hallucinations Matthew Ratcliffe offers a philosophical examination of the structure of human experience its vulnerability to disruption and how it is shaped by relations with other people He focuses on the seemingly simple question of how we manage to distinguish among our experiences of perceiving remembering imagining and thinking To answer this question he first develops a detailed analysis of auditory verbal hallucinations usually defined as hearing a voice in the absence of a speaker and thought insertion somehow experiencing one s own thoughts as someone else s He shows how thought insertion and many of those experiences labeled as hallucinations consist of disturbances in a person s sense of being in one type of intentional state rather than another Ratcliffe goes on to argue that such experiences occur against a backdrop of less pronounced but wider ranging alterations in the structure of intentionality

In so doing he considers forms of experience associated with trauma schizophrenia and profound grief The overall position arrived at is that experience has an essentially temporal structure involving patterns of anticipation and fulfillment that are specific to types of intentional states and serve to distinguish them phenomenologically Disturbances of this structure can lead to various kinds of anomalous experience Importantly anticipation fulfillment patterns are sustained regulated and disrupted by interpersonal experience and interaction It follows that the integrity of human experience including the most basic sense of self is inseparable from how we relate to other people and to the social world as a whole

Forms of Representation in the Aristotelian Tradition. Volume One: Sense Perception ,2022-04-11 The trilogy Forms of Representation in the Aristotelian Tradition investigates how Aristotle and his ancient and medieval successors understood the relation between the external world and the human mind It gives an equal footing to the three most influential linguistic traditions Greek Latin and Arabic and offers insightful interpretations of historical theories of perception dreaming and thinking This first volume focuses on sense perception and discusses philosophical questions concerning the external senses their classification and their functioning from Aristotle to Brentano
