Freedman,2016-07-07 Originally published in 1974 this volume is primarily devoted to what is known about human infancy from an ethological evolutionary viewpoint Included are discussions of pan specific traits presumably shared by all infants individual genetic variations on these behaviours as judged by twin studies sex differences presumably shared by infants of all ethnic groups and genetically based ethnic differences However the author favours neither biological determinism nor cultural determinism and does not consider interactionism to be a viable solution Instead a monistic position is taken stressing the inseparability of the innate and the acquired of genetics and environment and of biology and culture The heredity environment issue is tackled head on throughout the volume The interaction between the two an implied dualism is described as a statistical abstraction from measured populations while the position here is that heredity and environment are not separable in any single organism In the same vein the author argues that on logical grounds everything one does every cultural act has within it some biological component Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature ,1916 Author and subject index to a selected list of periodicals not included in the Readers guide and to composite books
