Law Enforcement Response Child abuse is a community problem No single agency has the training manpower resources or legal mandate to intervene effectively in child abuse cases No one agency has the sole responsibility for dealing with abused children When a child is physically assaulted or sexually abused the ideal response is for doctors to treat injuries therapists to counsel the child social services professionals to work with the family law enforcement officers to arrest the offender and attorneys to prosecute the case This is possible only if the agencies and organizations involved have an established process for working together to respond to child abuse cases The most effective community response involves establishing a child protection team that includes professionals from the medical mental health criminal justice social services and education fields who understand and appreciate the different roles responsibilities strengths and weaknesses of the other team members and can cooperate and coordinate their efforts Law enforcement s role in child abuse cases cannot be overstated It spans the entire case from the initial call through the investigation to the court proceedings Law enforcement officers investigate and determine if a criminal law has been violated identify and apprehend the offender file appropriate criminal charges and provide guidance and support to the child family and other agencies involved Law enforcement s response needs to be constant and consistent This guide provides the information officers need to ensure consistency understand their importance as vital members of the multidisciplinary team and recognize the value of effective procedures and protocols in guiding their work with other professionals to meet the needs of abused children Each year nearly 1 3 million children are reported missing Although the unforeseen absence of a child is always upsetting fortunately most missing children are returned home in a short period of time This fact however provides little consolation for the parents of children whose whereabouts and welfare remain unknown The Guide provides helpful advice for parents whose children are missing and also offers encouragement and support Investigators should have a working knowledge of battered child syndrome and what it means to an investigation Battered child syndrome is defined as the collection of injuries sustained by a child as a result of repeated mistreatment or beating If a child s injuries indicate intentional trauma or appear to be more severe than could reasonably be expected to result from an accident battered child syndrome should be suspected In such cases an investigator must do more than collect information about the currently reported injury A full investigation requires interviewing possible witnesses about other injuries that the child may have suffered obtaining the caretakers explanation for those injuries and assessing the conclusions of medical personnel who may have seen the victim before
